Our 28th Annual Linen Sale a Wonder

We thought a year ago we had reached the climax in Linen selling-did not see how we could sell any more goods. But seemingly difficult problems always have a solution. It is so in this case, which accounts for the most wonderful selling of Linens in the 28 years these sales have been in progress. The changes we made last season in the interior of our store gave us more space for Linens, which necessitates additional salespeople, a great many more than we ever had at these sales.

We have never planned for a sale with so much enthusiasm as we have for this, not only the employes of the store, but the patrons have been imbued with an enthusiastic expectancy for this great Linen selling, no wonder then it is the most stupendous we have ever held.

TUESDAY—the greatest one day's selling of Linens in this store's history.

WEDNESDAY-the greatest second day of the sale selling of Linens ever known.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY and SATURDAY—will be other big days at Linen selling at the special low prices.

Every Homemaker Should Visit This "Fordyce" Annual Linen Sale

WRITING TO POSTERITY.

Two Ohio mayors recently took the novel step of writing letters to the unknown persons who shall be occupying their respective offices 100 lot of consolation out of the fact years hence. The letters were sealed and filed away, not to be opened till There are too many men in this country who know how to pay off imagine with what interest the addressees will break the seals, when the time comes; with what anticipa-Advice on Matrimony and Castor tion the communities themselves will published. The incident of the letter writing serves to emphasize the carelessness with which records of current events are handled. A letter written 100 years ago, no matter how humble and unimportant its writer, is now highly esteemed. A person who has such could perform the feat with one hand manuscript written by a lineal ances tor, holds it very precious. One bearing the signature of a national figure a century ago brings a good price in the market. Never before in the world's history have such copious records of events as they pass been made. But how many of these records will be available a century from now? Verbal pictures of things as they stand in 1914 will largely have been destroyed before 2014. Even this printed page will, in all probability, have crumbled long before; the acts we perform may live but our written record of them is extremely, perishable. One hundred years ago the war of 1812 was dragging to its conclusion, the experiment of the republic was still doubtful-it was as impossible for human intellect to forecast the century ahead as it is for the people of today to foresee what conditions will exist in 2014. What wonders will electricity be performing 100 years hence? What will the automobile of 2014 look like? What will our Amer-

can democracy of that day be like? This exercise of writing letters to posterity might be taken up by others than public officials. Any man or women who has reason to anticipate an intelligent line of descendants might sit down one of these days and pen a few pages to the great-greatgreat-grandson who happens to bear the family name 100 years from now If it served no other purpose, it would aid the writer in setting to order his own ideas regarding present-day facts nd tendencies.—Plain Dealer.

"The principle of consulting local City hospital today for a surgical opsentiment in assessing taxes on real and personal property is fundamental Mr. and Mrs. A. Pugh of Toron-to were in Canfield Tuesday after-noon. Mrs. Pugh will have charge of in our form of government and has existed from the assessment of the Reed Bro.'s millinery store here the first tax on movables-known as the Saladin tithes-in the reign of Henry Miss Bernice Parshal went to Al-II in 1188. This principle of local ation purposes has its inherent diffiot her uncle, Tobias Cover, who for culties which have been recognized many years was a conductor on the from the first.

> Henry II provided a penalty of ex-communication from the church of those who falsely made returns, but he also provided that the fraud should be corrected by a jury of four or two freemen from the parish. Here is the beginning of the Englishman's dogged insistence on the principle that taxes shall be levied by those who pay them. Fraud has always existed in this method of assessment but for that account no man prior to James M. Cox has ever dared to take away the right of control from the local community. Fraud in returning values abides in the system just as sin and disease abide in human nature, but human life is not to be destroyed on that account; neither is the principle of local government to be destroyed because of the difficulties attending its proper adminstration.

"Gov. Cox, illogically, while advo-cating a larger control in government by the people in the direct election of United States senators and the direct primary, deliberately destroys this control by his system of personally appointing taxing agents.
